Biographical Sketch:

F. Xavier Castellanos, M.D., obtained his undergraduate degree in Linguistics at Vassar College, received a Master's of Science in Experimental Psychology at the University of New Orleans, and his M.D. from Louisiana State University Medical Center in Shreveport. He completed a combined residency in Pediatrics, General Psychiatry, and Child and Adolescent Psychiatry at the University of Kentucky, and a research fellowship on the neurobiology of Attention-Deficit/Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD) at the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH) before becoming Chief of the NIMH ADHD Research Unit. In 2001, he established the Institute for Pediatric Neuroscience at the NYU School of Medicine Child Study Center, where he is the Brooke and Daniel Neidich Professor of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry, Professor of Radiology, Physiology and Neuroscience, and Vice-Chair of Research, and Senior Research Psychiatrist at the Nathan Kline Institute for Psychiatric Research. Dr. Castellanos co-chairs the ADHD and Disruptive Behavior Disorders Workgroup on the DSM-5 Task Force and serves on the National Advisory Council on Drug Abuse for the National Institutes of Health. He has received many honors including the Blanche F. Ittleson Award from the American Psychiatric Association for his work on the neuroscience of ADHD. His work focuses on elucidating the neuroscience of ADHD through functional and structural brain imaging and genetic studies. His research is supported by NARSAD, the National Institute of Mental Health, the National Institute on Drug Abuse, and the Stavros S. Niarchos Foundation.
