He initiated the development of several areas of research including national surveys of mental disorder prevalence and service use, including the Epidemiologic Catchment Area (ECA) program, mental health service use in primary care and specialty settings, the organization and financing of such services, and international programs on the classification of mental disorders with the World Health Organization. He served as the Scientific Coordinator/Director for four National Advisory Mental Health Council reports to Congress on mental health insurance parity that resulted in the Federal Employees Health Benefit (FEHB) parity benefit in 2001, and was a section editor of the Surgeon's General's Report on Mental Health. In the international arena, Dr. Regier served as the mental health coordinator for the Health Committee of the U.S./Russian Commission on Science and Technology (1992-2000), and remains as a consultant to the World Health Organization's mental health initiatives.

Dr. Regier has been active as a reviewer and editorial/scientific advisory board member of numerous professional journals. He is currently the American Editor for the journal, Social Psychiatry and Psychiatric Epidemiology. He has also published over 200 articles, book chapters, and monographs.

Dr. Regier received his medical degree from the Indiana University School of Medicine and completed his medical internship at Montefiore Hospital in the Bronx. After a psychiatry residency at the Massachusetts General Hospital (MGH)/Harvard Medical School, he completed his research training at the Harvard School of Public Health and a fellowship at MGH. At the completion of his NIMH service, Dr. Regier retired as a Rear Admiral and Assistant Surgeon General in the Commissioned Corps of the United States Public Health Service.
