Biographical Sketch

Dr. Susan Swedo received her M.D. from Southern Illinois University School of Medicine and completed a pediatrics residency at Children's Memorial Hospital in Chicago. Dr. Swedo served as Chief of Adolescent Medicine for Northwestern University until 1986, when she joined Dr. Judy Rapoport's laboratory at the National Institute of Mental Health (NIMH). There, she earned scientific tenure and now leads the Pediatrics and Developmental Neuroscience Branch (PDN), which conducts research on the causes and treatment of pediatric neuropsychiatric disorders, including obsessive-compulsive disorder (OCD), anxiety disorders, and autistic spectrum disorders. Dr. Swedo and her colleagues were the first to identify a post-infectious subtype of OCD, which is known as PANDAS (pediatric autoimmune neuropsychiatric disorders associated with streptococcal infections). This line of research has resulted in several novel treatment and prevention strategies for childhood-onset OCD, as well as a patent for a biological marker that can be used to identify at-risk children. The recipient of numerous awards, including the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry Award for Scientific Achievement and the American College of Neuropsychopharmacology International Award for Clinical Research, Dr. Swedo is the author of more than 100 professional books and articles. She is also the co-author with Dr. Henrietta Leonard of two trade books: It's Not All In Your Head and Is It Just a Phase?
